Talk for Writing

Friday 14
December
2018

Practical strategies for developing children as independent writers, storytellers and poetry performers.

Pie Corbett has a wealth of knowledge and a great deal of experience from his background of being a teacher, a head teacher and an Ofsted inspector. His previous INSETs have proven to be extremely popular and beneficial to all those who have experienced them. He is an English educational writer and a poet and is well known for promoting creative approaches in the classroom. During his training, Pie uses a variety of tools to invoke and model effective, inspiring teaching strategies, thus enhancing not only our own skills and knowledge but helping us to deepen the understanding of all aspects of Literacy to the children we teach.

The INSET will commence promptly at 9.00am and refreshments available from 8.30am.

How do you teach and guide children to develop as independent, imaginative writers?

This conference will look at practical strategies for developing young children as storytellers and writers. We will explore approaches to helping children develop their own creative versions of well-known stories and poems both orally and through writing.

We will look at the link between learning model texts, drawing on quality literature and developing the craft of writing. The conference will explore how to help children deepen their understanding of what makes good writing, building up a store of patterns and writing techniques.

The cost per person is £100. This will also include all resources, refreshments and a freshly prepared 'Christmas Lunch' by our excellent in-house chef and her team.

Please note that places are given on a first come first served basis and due to the popularity of Pie Corbett INSETs are likely to sell out fast!
